CIRCULAR LETTER #620
JANUARY 2012
POST-MEETING FALL

Message From the President

Our last fall meeting has come and gone so quickly and I began writing these words on the day of the 2011 winter solstice. The symbolism of that day seems appropriate for this circular letter. Just as I am optimistically awaiting the beginning of a new year and the lengthening of the days (a slight touch of seasonal affective disorder), I feel increasingly optimistic about GAP and its future direction.

At the last meeting, I was encouraged by the feedback I received after my plenary address, “When Politics Distorts Science: A Psychiatrist Reports from the Trenches of the Culture Wars.” Many of you were struck by the ways in which special interest groups often try and (and sometimes succeed) in distorting scientific findings to achieve single-minded political or economic objectives. Some of you expressed interest in developing ways to respond, either as individuals or as GAP committees, to scientific distortions disseminated through the media for purposes of influencing public policy. No one seemed to disagree that GAP can play a vital role in the public policy arena’s marketplace of ideas.

In furtherance of efforts in that area, and as I reported in previous circular letters, our Committee on Planning, Marketing and Communications (PM&C) has been working on increasing GAP’s profile to reach a wider audience. As I also previously mentioned, GAP reached out to Catchafire, an organization with a mission of connecting business professionals interested in volunteering skills to provide pro bono assistance to nonprofit and social enterprises (like us). I sat in on some of the PM&C committee’s deliberations and for purposes of informing the GAP membership before our next meeting, I asked committee members Josh Gibson and Aaron Krasner for an update of their activities:

“Progress continues in the repositioning of GAP as a 21st century, media-oriented think tank. The PM&C committee met with Samantha Wolfe, a branding consultant referred through Catchafire. She and the Committee worked, both before and during the meeting, on updating GAP’s vision and mission statements. Based on that collaborative work, Ms. Wolfe suggested a new GAP tagline: ‘Leading Psychiatric Thought Since 1946.’ The Committee plans to present the final products of this collaboration at the general membership meeting in April for further comment and feedback.

“The next steps, which the PM&C committee continues to work on with other Catchafire consultants between meetings, involve identifying essential contributions to psychiatry that GAP has made through the years. We urge GAP members who are cognizant of our history to please email any suggestions for this project to josh.gibson@ucsf.edu. Future Catchafire consultants will help us update our logo, build a more media-friendly website, and develop both a public relations plan and social media plan for GAP.”

I’m also happy to report that GAP’s newly revitalized Plenary Committee, co-chaired by Stuart Copans and Douglas Kramer, has been very busy and they have plenaries scheduled for the next few years. In addition, that committee has agreed to assume responsibility for future posters presentations at our meetings. If your committee would like to present a poster and let other GAP members know what you are working on, then please contact Stu at sacopans@sover.net or speak to him at the next GAP meeting.

For the spring plenary, the Committee has invited Robert Whitaker to be the speaker. As an award-winning, journalistic critic of psychiatry's "over reliance" of antipsychotic medication, his talk promises to generate some lively discussions. To promote further discussion, next meeting's plenary will begin earlier than our usual 5 PM time. Further, to allow all of us to have a heads up on his thinking, the Foundation for Excellence in Mental Health, whose President and Chairman Virgil Stucker was an invited guest at our last meeting, will be mailing each GAP member a copy of Whitaker's last book, Anatomy of an Epidemic. Hopefully the discussion will be a lively one.

Several of GAP's new and longstanding committees are seeking new members: Administration and Leadership; Gender and Mental Health; International Relations; Neuropsychiatry; and Professionalism. Take a moment to read their Committee Reports below and if you know of colleagues who might be invited to GAP to serve on these committees, let the Committee Chairs know.

By the time you receive this, the holidays will have passed. I hope you all had good ones and look forward to seeing all of you at our spring GAP meeting in White Plains.

Jack Drescher, M.D., President

Friedman, M.D., will be Editor and Jennifer I. Downey, M.D., Deputy Editor. Friedman and Downey are Co-Chairs of the GAP Human Sexuality Committee. Psychodynamic Psychiatry is presently the only psychiatry journal devoted entirely to psychodynamic issues.

The journal’s emphasis will be clinical and evidence-based. All aspects of psychodynamically informed clinical work will be considered for publication. These include reviews, case discussions and clinical research. In addition Psychodynamic Psychiatry will publish articles that further the understanding and application of developmental bio-psycho-social paradigms. This means we will encourage articles at the boundary between psychoanalytic psychology and the neuro-sciences on the one hand, and social sciences on the other.

The mission of this new journal overlaps with that of GAP. In keeping with mutual interests, special consideration will be given to material submitted by GAP committees. Articles should be sent to selsden@ssmgt.com. Queries should be addressed to Richard C. Friedman: rcf2@columbia.edu.

Disasters and Terrorism

The Committee on Disasters and Terrorism continues to discuss and chart its place and that of the field of disaster psychiatry in a world ten years out from 9/11 and hopes to continue to play a role in promoting the preparedness of our field for helping the world face catastrophe. We are pursuing next steps since the Spring, 2011 publication of the book we developed in collaboration with Disaster Psychiatry Outreach, Disaster Psychiatry: Readiness, Evaluation, and Treatment (APPI, 2011). Our immediate project is the development of an online CME course based on the book with APPI, which Ed Kantor will be overseeing for the committee. A second newer project being explored in parallel is the development of disaster psychiatry practice guidelines. We also hope to explore collaborations with other related GAP committees, including the global and public psychiatry committees.

Guests: Sophie Grigoriadis, M.D., Director of Mental Health at Sunnybrook Medical Service Center in Toronto.

The committee is working on two fast track articles:

1. “Science” used to push political agendas under discussion. The manuscript will be targeted at mental health providers and general public. The focus between meetings will be continued discussions and possible working with LGBT Committee.
2. Abortion restrictions as a form of bullying in first draft targeted at general public as on op-ed article.

The committee is still looking for males and other new members of this committee.

Global Psychiatry Committee:

Committee members discussed the following issues and projects

1. "All-in, all-out" NRMP policy for 2013 match: seen as disproportionately hurtful to community hospital programs and their IMG applicant pool because lateness of match makes visa completion, especially for H1B impossible for July 1. Also, fear of faring poorly in the match will paradoxically push more IMG applicants out of the match. Dr. Saunders will draft, Dr. Aggarwal will edit help with literature review, Dr. Sperber will help with literature search. Initial outline for January committee meeting, draft for spring meeting.
2. Global psychiatry project on Human Trafficking: Drs. Aggarwal and Saunders. What role does psychiatry play in the rescue/rehabilitation of victims of sexual trafficking in international contexts? Review of literature of cultural variables in resilience against PTSD following trauma. Are rescue groups making use of psychiatric interventions, with what outcomes? Consult with the NYU Torture group faculty, ask about their investigation of DSM PTSD criteria in Sudan. Review Georgetown 2008 bibliography on human trafficking. What is the presence of IMG authors in this scholarship? Do IMG psychiatrists have a special role to play because of their potential cultural familiarity with the settings and personal interest in advocacy for victims from their culture? Outline of proposal for April meeting, with initial literature review. Proposal for IRB submission for spring meeting, completion a year later.
3. No Resident Left Behind project, update. Editorial feedback was received that the essay as submitted was too much of a "diatribe," although a second reviewer praised it for addressing a neglected concern.
 - a. It is proposed to add to the essay a trial method for evaluation: To address the problem of evaluator bias when the exam is given to residents by their own teachers in the course of clinical work at their own programs, a proposal will be added to the essay to require the all CSV exams be videotaped, and that the tapes be submitted with the passing outcomes, for random sampling review by a committee of experts independent of the program, blinded to the program identity.
 - b. A pilot project will then be done enlisting programs willing to participate, in which the program's evaluations of the taped interviews will be compared with evaluations done by independent experts, also looking at IMG/USMG identity of evaluator and resident. Dr. Aggarwal will revise the current draft, and Dr. Sperber will write the new component, for review by the committee at the spring meeting and submission to the editorial board within a month after the spring meeting. The research project will go forward with IRB submission at the participating institutions and data gathering, for evaluation and writing up within 12 months, submitted spring 2013.
4. Proposed Global Psychiatry Committee goals and objectives
 - a. Scholarship and advocacy related to the careers, well-being, and practices of IMG psychiatrists in the United States
 - b. Writing and editing support for members' scholarly projects
 - c. Development of scholarly projects in currently significant areas of interest in global psychiatry, including IMG workforce, culture specific education and psychiatric care, psychiatric consequences of global upheaval, culturally informed psychiatric care strategies for immigrant populations in US, experiences of USMG psychiatrists practicing abroad.
 - d. Policy review and advocacy for psychiatric education of immigrant psychiatrists in the US
5. Ideas about the IMG Celebration at APA May 2013. Develop and use educational historical materials about the contributions of IMG psychiatrists to American psychiatry. How to attract all members to the IMG Celebration? Consider making this event the first annual occasion of Psychiatry Diversity Day at the APA Annual meeting, followed by African American, Hispanic American, Women Psychiatrist Celebrations, thus creating a reciprocal interest across all identified minorities among psychiatrists, appealing to a general interest in the cultural heterogeneity in our profession.

6. Ideas for IMG summit to be chaired by Dr. Rao Sept. 2012, looking at current controversies related to conflicting ideologies about meeting the US doctor shortage, and the role of IMGs in meeting clinical demand generally, and in underserved areas. In addition to representation proposed by Dr. Rao, from the ECFMG, American College of Physicians, APA, AMA, and WPA, also include rigorous healthcare economists like Norcini to review and criticize estimates of workforce needs. Also, invite policy experts from CMS and other stake-holders like HHS Secretary Sibelius to discuss workforce economics.
7. Feedback to Dr. Sperber about his von Tauber Institute research proposal on “Cultural Conflicts for Immigrant Families with the US Geriatric Care System.”
8. Because many committee members had professional schedule conflicts (giving the Boards, AMA meeting, etc.) and were unable to attend, there will be an interim committee meeting at the end of the year. Members present prefer a Saturday at a restaurant in New York City, during the day on Saturday, January 7, after children have returned to school from winter vacation.

The committee reviewed what we had accomplished thus far and what direction we wished to take in the future. Our first priority for the spring meeting is discussing data collected by the committee comparing sexuality among patients with bipolar spectrum disorder to that of control subjects. We developed and used our own instrument and a pilot study we carried out was based on our own patients. Our interest in the area of bipolar sexuality has led to two publications thus far: one on bipolar spectrum children by Dr. Adelson and one on driven sexual behavior in bipolar spectrum patients by Dr. Downey. We are also critically reviewing the literature on paraphilia- sexual deviation and will be discussing this next time. “

Neuropsychiatry:

The GAP Committee for Neuropsychiatry is in the process of forming. A small group of psychiatrists who are active and interested in this arena plan to have a preliminary meeting in mid-December in the Boston area.

Neuropsychiatry encompasses topics as diverse and as fascinating as: sleep and mental health, the neurological underpinnings of social cognition, traumatic brain injury, transcranial magnetic stimulation for treatment of depression, the study of consciousness, neurodegenerative diseases and their mental status manifestations, epigenetics, linguistics, gender differences in the brain, the importance of executive functions, the significance of mirror neurons, the biology of aggression, creativity, learning, mitochondrial dysfunction in psychiatric illness, and the list goes on...and on.

In light of the vast territory that the topic “neuropsychiatry” encompasses, the very first goal of our group will be to find a focus of interest. We then hope to define a small project and lay out a strategic plan that will include consulting with others and expanding the committee membership. We expect to be up and running and ready to join in as an active committee at the GAP spring meeting.

Planning, Marketing and Communications:

Present: Paul Fink, Harvey Ruben, Steve Sharfstein, Steve Scheiber, Jack Drescher, John Looney, Josh Gibson, Aaron Krasner, Seth Powsner, Jack Bonner, Frances Roton

This was a very good meeting where we were able to accomplish a great deal regarding movement toward social marketing and branding. Thanks for the help of Josh Gibson, a new member of our committee. We had with us Samantha Wolf, a volunteer from Catchafire Organization who is going to help us with public relations and communications aspect of this project. We are entitled five consultants each dealing with one of the following:

1. Brand
2. PR communications
3. Social media
4. Storytelling
5. Logo

Each of these is important to developing a complete marketing plan project.

We explained a little bit about GAP and the history. All of the members had filled out a survey that she had sent us from which she was able to do a brilliant job in putting together a one-page document about GAP which included a vision statement, a mission statement, a statement of our values and a tagline as well as some action items that she felt needed to be pursued. As I said, we are entitled to four additional consultants. We have given assignments to Josh Gibson and Aaron Krasner to pursue them. Josh will go after a branding person, a storytelling person and the marketing person. Josh will pursue a PR/Community person as well. Aaron will help us connect with the social media person. We spent a significant amount of time talking about how we would roll this out to the steering committee and to the membership as well as the board. The bottom-line goal as enunciated by John Looney was to return to our former glory.

The question of turnaround time, how to get things moved in and out of GAP took a great deal of time and thought. We came up with an idea that if we could use David Adler, he knows what all the committees are doing, that he could contact the chairman to respond to special issues of the day. In addition and therefore a thoughtful and realistic response would be marvelous.

The committee is looking forward to meeting its new consultant and working with him on the five areas outlined above. If we're able to do this, GAP will change forever. It's important that we do it carefully so that we not undo much of the good that GAP currently does. We don't want to do it in a way that fails the system. Whether we keep the name GAP or not, confusion with jeans will stop. We will have our own identity so that people would ask us to research an area and open up new ideas.

We are particularly grateful to Josh Gibson for his energy and his hard work in getting this thing going and especially for connecting us to Catchafire.

Honored GAP Colleagues:

I write with gratitude for the warm welcome you provided me as your 'presidential visitor' during your recent conference. In some ways I felt as though I was in the ancient academy with Socrates and his fellow scholars who were examining the life of psychiatry. You are to be commended for taking the time to continue your venerable inquiries with one another. It was a pleasure to walk amongst you for a few days.

Thank you for your questions about CooperRiis. I appreciate that several of you took time to learn about our work and efforts to help very complicated individuals with their recovery from mental illness, half of whom we offer up to 18-month scholarships.

Thank you as well for your inquiries into our new community foundation for improving mental health care, which is also driven by philanthropy.

Gratefully,

Virgil Stucker
